

Square 9's New Guide Tackles Security, Compliance, and Information Management in Government

Streamline Information Governance in Your Municipality or Agency

New Haven, CT. December 11, 2024 – According to a 2023 state CIO survey, 69% of respondents reported their data governance as “in the beginning phase,” highlighting much-needed changes in the way government agencies manage their information.

Square 9's new Guide to Intelligent Information Management in Government serves as a key companion to implementing these changes. The detailed guide provides keen insights towards enhanced security, compliance, and records management for agencies at all levels of government – leading to greater efficiency and centralized information access.

"Information governance is at the heart of what we do, and the benefits it provides are highly relevant to the current challenges government agencies face," Says Square 9 President and CEO Stephen Young. "By implementing intelligent information management, these agencies will experience less data silos without sacrificing security – creating efficiencies that enhance public service."
